CENTER FOR CHINA & GLOBALIZATION
中 国 与 全 球 化 智 库

Global Vision for China, China Wisdom for the World

Annual Report 2016

The Center for China and Globalization (CCG) is a leading Chinese independent think tank dedicated to the study of Chinese public policy and globalization. Boasting a strong research team, it enjoys an impressive record of publications and events with broad public policy impact. CCG's research agenda centers on studies of international talents and immigrants, foreign relations, international trade and investment, homegrown MNCs and topics pertaining to regional and global governance. Founded in 2008 by Dr. Wang Huiyao and Dr. Miao Lu, CCG today has some 100 in-house researchers and supporting team in its headquarter in Beijing as well as its subsidiaries and divisions spanning across China including Shanghai, Shenzhen, Guangzhou and Qingdao.

The think tank is co-chaired by three eminent Chinese: Long Yongtu, former Vice Minister of Commerce and chief negotiator for China's accession into the WTO; He Yafei, former Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs; Ronnie Chen, Hong Kong tycoon and philanthropist. The advisory board represents a constellation of prominent figures from academia, business and policy-making circles at home and abroad.

According to the "2016 Global Go To Think Tank Index" by the University of Pennsylvania Think Tank and Civil Society Program (TTCSP), CCG ranked 111th of the top think tanks worldwide and was one of the world's top 40 independent think tanks. The TTCSP along with several Chinese academic institutions rank CCG as China's premier independent think tank.

Message from the Chairman

Focusing on the Study of Globalization

The Center for China and Globalization (CCG), as its name suggested, focuses on the globalization studies. As a think tank with many significant academic achievements, CCG possesses a wide range of study interest from global governance to internationalization of talent and enterprises.

Challenged by global economic shifts, CCG conducted a series of intense studies as well as thematic seminars about globalization and world governance in the past few years. Dozens of influential academic reports and series of “Blue Books” have been published along with the studies. Through the process, we have gained plenty of fruitful and cheerful results.

As the chairman of CCG, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to our council members, advisory members and scholars who made such fabulous contributions to CCG.

China has gradually integrated herself into the network of global economy during the past 15 years. As the second largest economy in the world, China has contributed enormous positive influence to global governance ever since the country joined WTO in 2001.

Meanwhile, CCG has been devoted in the involvement of China’s globalization as well as the process of Reform and Opening-up since its foundation in 2008. CCG now ranks among the top independent think tanks in China with its prestigious influence in academic studies.

Challenged by complex international situation and global economic shift in the past years, we will embark new researches on globalization and internationalization about Chinese enterprises for the upcoming 2017. The major events concerned with global governance and international and regional relations are still uncertain. Therefore, CCG would put more efforts on analyzing global events to benefit the interactions between globalization and China.

It’s CCG’s obligation to contribute more to studies of globalization and global governance. Comparing with western countries, Chinese think tanks share shallow roots. It seems relatively easy to be one of top Chinese think tanks, but there is still a long way to go before CCG to become one of the leading international thinking hubs.

I sincerely hope that the staffs of CCG, our experts and council members will work together closely and make CCG a better organization in 2017.

Long Yongtu

Chairman of CCG

Co-Chairman's Message

Globalization: CCG's Mission for the Future

Since its establishment in 2008, the Center for China and Globalization has been closely following the footprint of globalization, and studying the role of China in the process. After years of unremitting and dedicated efforts, CCG has grown into the most influential Chinese think tank specialized in the study and policy advice on globalization.

China needs one or even more think tanks to study globalization and other global issues and what is more, to provide effective solutions. Although globalization has encountered some setbacks, it will remain inevitable, and so will the trend of Chinese enterprises' going global. No countries or companies in this world can cope with the new challenges on its own, and many issues need joint efforts of whole world. Therefore, the intellectual support and solutions from think tanks become increasingly important not only for a individual company, a country, but also for the whole world. So, it is a great expectation CCG lives up to.

The setbacks and doubts of globalization mean necessity of further improvement of global governance structure. China should not merely function as a world-wide trader and investor in the world, but more important, as a major contributor of wisdom to the improvement. With rich historic and cultural heritage as well as extensive experience of globalization, China is expected to provide valuable input to future global structure. What to contribute and how to contribute is another job CCG should take on.

From the day when it was formed, CCG has made globalization its core area of study. CCG has built a strong management team, advisory council with numerous members from business circles, academic advisors and research fellows with outstanding academic background and international perspectives, and an extensive worldwide network. Now CCG has grown up from a small organization to a leading independent think tank in China with a world-wide reputation.

Moving on, with enhanced communications and cooperation with global partners, CCG will further elevate its status in the international academic community and make it into the rank of the world-class think tanks in the future. For a country with such a wide global influence, China should also have internationally leading think tanks. This is the third mission for CCG.

Looking back on the year 2016 and looking ahead to 2017, I would like to congratulate our CCG colleagues for your achievement in 2016, to convey my gratitude to all council members for your continuous support, and to give my best wishes for CCG in 2017.

Look forward to another fruitful year of CCG!

Ronnie Chen

Co-Chair of CCG

Co-Chairman's Message

Global Governance, a Constant Topic to Study

Globalization met unprecedented questions and challenges across the world in 2016. Also in the year I was invited to present at a dozen of seminars hosted by Center for China and Globalization (CCG) on the issues like international relations, Sino-US ties, globalization, etc.

What impressed me most were the topics CCG chose to discuss, which were very close to the current situation and of high practical values. The second deepest impression was CCG staff's enthusiasm and commitment to the cause of think tank. The innovative and active administration team's foresight became another attraction to determine my decision joining in CCG.

CCG has dedicated to the studies of Chinese international policy, globalization of enterprises and international talents for years with impressive and sound research records. Led by prominent Chinese scholars, senior formal government officials and international team, CCG has grown into an indispensable think tank in China.

As a Chinese veteran diplomat for decades, I saw the profound changes of the international society, power balance and numerous progresses either in global governance, world economy or cross-cultural communications, and also the new challenges the human being has to face.

In the past ten decade, the development of globalization has boosted economic growth yet also brought in new problems. Now, globalization is at its crossroads. It's not surprising to see setbacks of such a huge process as globalization, the point is how we deal with the issues, and whether we can frankly exchange ideas, share our thoughts, and finally find solutions to those challenges.

Think tanks are provider of practical, innovative, and forward-looking thoughts and solutions for the public and policy makers. Thereby, CCG has the responsibility to play bigger roles in the studies of globalization, global governance as well as international talents. Challenges accompany with further progress, and bring us opportunities making more breakthroughs, and thus becoming an internationally-known think tank.

In 2016, thanks to its ample scholars and extensive global network, CCG made great achievements on the track-II diplomacy and exchanges with overseas counterparts. Track-II is the think tanks' territory, and global governance needs world-wide communications in various channels. I hope CCG will be more active in this filed under the joint efforts of its staff, fellows and council members.

He Yafei

Co-Chairman, former Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs

CCG President Message

Adhere to Our Mission and Advance Our Cause

At the beginning of 2017, Chinese government gives its call for creating a favorable environment for social think tanks. The Center for China and Globalization (CCG), as the leading social think tank in China, is excited with such recognition for its efforts, although nine years later since it was established.

In 2016, CCG continued to contribute proposals to policy makers on issues of globalization, international trade and investment, international human resources, the fields CCG has been engaged in for years and owns a hundred of academic scholars and years of study bases. Some of CCG reports have received positive feedbacks and request for further research from the central government agencies.

In order to promote the Belt and Road Initiative, CCG has established the Belt and Road Institute and World Chinese Entrepreneurs Institute that already published a number of study reports and articles with valuable input.

In 2016, CCG continued to improve research quality, mobilize its full-time staff and nonresidential fellows to enrich their academic background and research capacity.

In the year, CCG co-published a series of Blue Book reports with China Social Sciences Academic Press (SSAP), including Annual Report On Chinese Students Studying Abroad, and Report on Globalization of Chinese Enterprise. A dozens of reports on other issues such as global governance and globalization strategies, China-U.S. relations were finished and released to the public.

CCG, ranked as the most influential social think tank in China, has attracted more outstanding experts home and abroad, and expanded its network with global intellectual community in 2016. Its advisory board is composed of a constellation of prominent figures from academic, business and policy-making communities in China and abroad. A pool of young talent joined CCG, a creative and energetic team was formed.

CCG was also quite active in promoting international cooperation and exchanges. In September 2016, CCG and Asia Society jointly hosted a luncheon conference in Washington D.C. to discuss the Sino-US economic relations with American counterparts; and a great number of international visitors from think tanks, universities, government agencies came to CCG to share their insights about China and the changing world.

CCG's relentless effort and persistent dedication is being recognized and awarded. In 2016, CCG has been for multiple times ranked the No.1 social think tank in China, thanks to the government's encouraging policies and society's growing support. Of course, we have to keep in mind the wide gap between us and the world-class think tanks.

In 2017, CCG will adhere to its goals it set at beginning, and continue to promote China's opening and reform as well as international understanding, and global peaceful development. We will play a more significant role in international academic community and provide more intellectual support to the policymakers and the public for a new version of globalization and global governance.

Wang Huiyao

President of CCG, Councillor of the State Council of China

Organization Structure

With persistent efforts since 2008 when it was founded, CCG has grown up to be a leading international think tank in China. Under the help of reputable entrepreneurs with global vision, CCG has become increasingly influential across the world. We also have invited some well-known people with strong senses of social responsibility to be our advisors. What is more, as more and more domestic and international scholars join us, CCG has built up an intensive international academic network.

It's our honor to have three renowned figures to chair our advisory council: Mr. Long Yongtu, Former Vice Minister of Foreign Trade and Economic Cooperation and former Secretary General of the Boao Forum, Mr. He Yafei, Former Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Ronnie Chan, Chairman of Hanglung Group and Co-chairman of Asia Society in Hong Kong; and it is also our pride to have hundreds of business leaders and scholars joining us as advisory council members and academic experts.

Policy Impact

CCG has been known for its efficiency to influence policy-making agencies through rigorous academic studies. By establishing research projects for specific issues, and publishing research papers and submitting policy advisory reports, CCG has maintained close connections and established effective communication channels with governments at various levels.

In 2016, CCG submitted 112 policy advisory reports, among which 22 were adopted by ministries and departments under the State Council and CPC Central Committee, while more reports were reviewed and commented by senior leaders in the central government.

Additionally, CCG has provided crucial support to local governments' policymaking. CCG was the only intelligent organization that participated in Beijing Government's research on "entry-exit" administration reformation, and many of its recommendations were also adopted by the Ministry of Public Security.

Policy Advocacy

Ministry of Public Security released 20 new policies on January 12th 2016, which is about the entry-exit administration regulations in Beijing. The policies bring new treatments on permanent residence permit, entrepreneurship and employment, and citizenship management for foreigners and overseas Chinese in China.

The policies has be implemented on March 1st the same year, and would have a significant impact on the allocation of global human resources and the process of globalization in China.

On June 30th 2016, International Organization for Migration (IOM) held a special council, which officially approves the membership application of China, making China an official member of IOM.

Becoming a member of IOM is an inevitable path for China to participate as an important role in global governance. Moreover, China could offer more support on International immigration programs. It is an audacious try for China to join global governance system, demonstrating China's greater duty in maintaining safe paths for international migrations.

Public Influence

Through 2016 CCG has achieved sustainable development and brought tremendous of public influence to the society. The effort has been recognized by experts from different fields. CCG was ranked 110th by “The 2015 Global Go To Think Tank Index” which is compiled and released by the University of Pennsylvania Think Tank and Civil Society Program (TTCSP). It also ranked CCG top 7th think tank in China and No.1 social independent think tank in China. CCG was placed No. 1 independent think tank in the “2016 Chinese Think Tank Influence Report” by Sichuan Academy of Social Science and Chengdu Information Center of the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

Another think tank influence evaluation conducted by the Center for Chinese Think Tank Studies and Evaluation at Nanjing University and the Think Tank Research and Publishing Center of Guangming Daily not only pinned CCG as China’s No. 1 independent think tank but also rewarded CCG President Wang Huiyao as one of the best independent think tank scholars in 2016.

In addition, CCG was selected as one of the top 10 think tanks studying on “Belt & Road” initiative by the “One Belt One Road 100” Forum and crowned “the 2016 most internationally influential think tank in China” by the International Brand Federation. CCG also won the top reward in Phoenix TV’s global think tank appraisals.

CCG’s research accomplishments and activity results have brought the attention of many mainstream media home and abroad. Xinhua, People’s Daily, China Daily, CNN, BBC, the Wall Street Journal and CNBC, have published the work results of CCG reports. Some media cited a large number of CCG research conclusions in their news.

Core Academic Study Areas

For years, CCG has been dedicated to the study of international human resource and Chinese companies from globalization perspective, tracking policy development and identifying underlying trends. In addition, CCG also has expertise in the researching economic globalization and global governance. Over time, CCG has accumulated a great deal of data and material, which give it unique strength to perfect the valuable policies and recommendations in these areas.

Globalization of Talents

The study of international talents and immigrants is the core of CCG's research. In 2016, CCG continued to act as a leading role to promote globalization of Chinese talents by publishing a great number of well-received reports, including:

-The Report on International Experts Introduction to China 2001-2015

-The 5th Annual Report on Chinese Studying Abroad

-The Study on the Talent Development Strategies in China and Foreign Countries

-The 3rd annual report about the employment of returned overseas Chinese

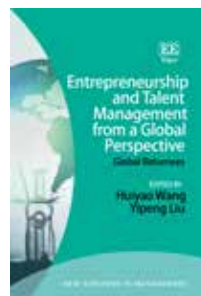

-The first annual report on International Schools in China and on Innovation and Entrepreneurship Education of Chinese Higher Education Institutions respectively

In addition, CCG was commissioned by multiple government agencies including the CPC's Department of Organization, the NDRC, the National Office of Chinese Language Council International and State Administration of Foreign Experts Affairs.

CCG's policy recommendations on introducing skills for the immigration system in China attract many foreign talents. CCG established a mechanism to develop globally competitive talent, which has made a significant contribution to Chinese talents policy innovation.

In 2015, CCG held the second "China Talents 50" Roundtable Forum, which gathered top scholars, policy makers and Chinese business executives to discuss talents development strategies. This annual forum has become a summit event to discuss talent policy, a standing platform for academic circle, and a public sector to exchange ideas.

Core Academic Study Areas

Globalization of Enterprises

CCG has devoted tremendous resources to observing, studying and promoting the globalization of Chinese enterprises. In 2016, CCG continued to closely track the progress and proposed policy measures to help Chinese companies go abroad. It published the 3rd annual report on the Globalization of Chinese Enterprises and selected the top globalized Chinese companies using self-designed evaluation system.

Moreover, CCG held the 3rd annual China Outbound Investment Forum in Sanya, Hainan, with a theme "China's Driving Force of Overseas Investment: Promotion and Diversity".

In addition, commissioned by multiple government agencies and other institutions, CCG has conducted research on the globalization of Chinese enterprises and published the reports specialized on this issue, including the Report on the Outlook of Chinese Companies' Outbound Investment.

Its policy recommendation on supporting Chinese companies going abroad and expanding outbound investment to accelerate Chinese economic transformation had been widely acknowledged.
